HEADQUARTERS
2677TH REGIMENT OSS (PROV)
APO 534 U.S.ARMY

11 October 1944

201 - Musulin, George S.

SUBJECT: Recommendation for Award

TO : Commanding General NATOUSA

THROUGH: (1) Commanding Officer, Co. B, 2677th Regt., OSS (Prov)

(2) Commanding Officer, 2677th Regt., (Prov)

1. Under the provisions of AR 600-45 dated 22 September 1943, as amended, it is recommended that George S. Musulin, 0519461, 1st Lieutenant, AUS, Co. B, 2677th Regt., Office of Strategic Services (Provisional), be awarded the Legion of Merit for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services.

2. Description of Action:

Early in July 1944 plans were drawn up to send an evacuation team to General Mihailovich's command for the purpose of evacuating Allied airmen. This team, known as the Halyard Team, was composed of Lt. Musulin, officer in charge, M/Sgt Michael Majacich, and Sp (X) 3/c Arthur Jibilian, radio operator. The team was detailed to the Fifteenth Air Force and designated as the 1st Air Force Rescue Unit. Lt. Musulin was chosen as the person to lead this team inasmuch as he had parachuted into Chetnik territory on the night of 19 October 1943 to act as interpreter for officers of the Allied Mission to Mihailovich Headquarters. He was later evacuated from the area but was the last of the American officers of the mission to come out, having served continuously and with great credit to himself and his country for over seven months - until May 1944.

The Halyard operation was organized and planned for an area some 50 miles south of Belgrade where it was believed a large number of Allied airmen had congregated. Their exact location was not known and the probability of adequate reception was in doubt. From the beginning it appeared that the task would require blind dropping - a very dangerous thing to attempt in enemy occupied territory. Lt. Musulin and his team, however, were anxious to undertake the job regardless of the risks involved. An attempt was made on an old British radio link with Mihailovich to contact the latter and request that a reception party be arranged for the Halyard team. In response to signals, a message purporting to come from Mihailovich formed the basis for the first of several sorties arranged for the dropping of the team to its destination. The first sortie was unsuccessful because there was no evidence of reception and no signals from the ground as the purported Mihailovich signal indicated.

After additional unsuccessful sorties were flown on the nights of 25 and 26 July 1944, the British radio link was abandoned as insecure and inadequate. On the latter occasion the ground signals observed were not those indicated by the Mihailovich radio and a number of flares were lighted to add to the unfriendly atmosphere. In all, seven attempts were made to reach the destination.

In the meantime a new radio contact had been established by one of the American airmen in Mihailovich territory who borrowed a radio set and established contact with his base. This link was used to arrange a reception party.

On the night of 2/3 August 1944 the Halyard team took off for a pre-arranged pin-point and parachuted into western Serbia. The team parachuted two miles west of the reception area. Sgt Rajacich made a tree landing without injury. A short time later the group contacted the reception committee of Mihailovich. Lt. Musulin declared that the ovation received and the joy of the American airmen were worth all the risks that had been involved.

There were approximately 250 airmen in the area. There were 26 sick, wounded, and injured airmen who were being administered to by two local doctors, an Italian doctor, and a few natives. Supplies were inadequate and the food situation was becoming a problem. A large number of Americans were totally barefoot, others were inadequately clothed in Air Corps attire, and the remaining members were clothed in peasant apparel of all sizes and descriptions. Many wore beards and long hair. The morale of these airmen was tremendously improved upon the arrival of the Halyard team.

Soon after arrival Lt. Musulin made plans to organize the airmen in groups. Funds were distributed to purchase additional supplies. Courrier service was established with the groups to inform them of daily progress concerning evacuation. General Draza Mihailovich assigned the First Rovna Gorski Corps as a security force for the protection of the airmen. When radio contact with Italy was established on 3 August 1944 supplies including clothing, food, and medical items were requested and these supplies were received on 6 August 1944.

One of the major problems was to find a suitable landing strip for evacuation. There was a short landing strip in the area which could be improved and lengthened but even with improvement it would have been only the absolute minimum in length for C-47's. Other areas were discovered which were better, but it was decided to use the first because of the difficulties involved in moving a large group, including sick and injured, over mountainous terrain. Three hundred laborers and sixty ox-carts were secured to improve and lengthen the air strip.

Arrangements were completed for the first phase of evacuation on the night of 9 Aug. 1944. At 2300 four C - 47's landed and evacuated 48 airmen. Two of the planes brought equipment and medical supplies. A medical officer and two aides came in to care for the wounded. On another plane Lt. Lalich arrived to help in the evacuation work.

Further plans were made to continue evacuation during daylight. On 10 Aug. 1944 at 0800 a wave of six C - 47's with twenty P - 51's for fighter cover came in. As the planes came in and were loaded with shouting, happy Americans, the women and girls showered the planes, their crews, and the airmen with garlands of flowers. Overhead the P-51 pilots gave a special exhibition. The Halyard team, despite this show, "sweated" every landing and takeoff. Six planes landed, loaded, and took off. They circled until proper altitude was gained and then headed for the base with their fighter protection. One half hour later six more C-47's with fighter cover came in to complete the evacuation. Only when the last airman was loaded and the planes headed for home did the Halyard team relax. The first daylight evacuation of airmen from enemy territory was complete. Two hundred and forty-one Americans were taken off the "Missing in Action" list. Along with the Yanks, six British, four French, nine Italians, seven Jugoslavs, and twelve Russians were evacuated.

On the nights of 26 and 27 August 1944 Lt. Musulin and his team evacuated fifty-eight more airmen and two British. Lt. Musulin came out under orders on this evacuation.

3. I certify that I have personal knowledge of the results of Lt. Musulin's mission and was present in Italy where radio contact was established with the Halyard mission in the field. Inasmuch as the other members of the mission are still in the field it is not possible to secure certificates of eye-witnesses.

4. Status or assignment at time of action for which award is recommended: Was 2nd Lieutenant. He was the officer in charge of the American mission to the Chetniks. Musulin was promoted to 1st Lieutenant on 7 September 1944. At present he is acting as Jugoslav adviser to the Chief of Special Operations, OSS, pending further assignment.

5. Statement of service subsequent to action cited: All Lt. Musulin's subsequent service has been honorable.

Period of service with OSS, from 4/43 to _____ Service in the Theater, from 17 mos. to _____

Assessment (S,W,WS) _____ Date of arrival in USA 11/44 Date of this interview 24 Jan. 45

Positions & Missions in theater: Special field operations. Behind enemy lines, location of air fields, etc.

Appraisals in theater: Has been recommended for award of Legion of Merit for his part in the evacuation of some 425 American Airmen forced down in enemy occupied territory. Superior: Physical Ability. Excellent: Motivation, Practical Intelligence, Stability. Very Satisfactory: Ability to Work with Others, Leadership. (B.N.Deranian)

Recommendations in theater: Further use in OSS: demolition or liaison assignments in enemy occupied territory. (B.N.Deranian)

Attitude towards OSS: Favorable. "A splendid organization." Complains of administrative confusions.

Desires as to future assignment: "I'm willing to do anything OSS thinks I'm qualified to do."

Evaluation: Of American birth but Serbian ancestry, this officer was very glad to have the opportunity to serve his country working with Mihailovitch in Yugoslavia. He is a strong supporter of this native leader, and is violently opposed to any communist-inspired organization such as Tito's. Has been well trained for SO-SI field work, and has the ability to do a good job in the field. He holds strong views and argues for them powerfully if opposed, which makes for poor social relations. Extraverted. Good leadership ability; willing to take responsibility and initiative. Except for argumentativeness, fairly even-tempered. Despite his obesity he seems to be in good physical condition.

Recommendation: Continuation with OSS: suitable for operational assignment in Far East.
